

Berlin Capital Program | Program participation and instructions for entering Germany

Depending on the current circumstances, the airlines that will take you to Germany as well as the German immigration authorities, and German institutions to be visited during the Berlin Capital Program may require proof of health from the program participants. Participants may be asked to answer questions about their health status and to show proof of vaccination against Covid-19. Program participants will receive current information as part of their program preparation.

Applicants are requested to stay up to date about travel and entry to Germany. Current information is provided by the German Embassy in the United States at:

www.germany.info/us-en/service/covid-19/2321562.